

Assisted Living

Assisted living is a community-based, residential services option for older persons and/or adults with physical disabilities who need assistance with the activities of daily living. Assisted living combines housing, personal services and light medical or nursing care in an environment that promotes maximum individual independence, dignity, privacy and choice.

Assisted Living Services

Assisted living encompasses a wide range of personal care services and assistance with activities of daily living. These include: grooming, transferring, ambulating, bathing, dressing, eating and meal preparation, toileting, social and emotional support, and nursing services.

Assisted Living Settings

Assisted living settings may include small group and residential homes, sections of apartment buildings and housing clusters, e.g., townhouses and mobile homes, free standing facilities, and sections of hospitals or nursing homes.

Financial Assistance

Financial assistance is available for low income individuals through Medicaid or general funds if they meet the medical and financial criteria. For additional information and eligibility requirements, call Delaware Health and Social Services' Division of Services for Aging and Adults with Physical Disabilities, 1-800-223-9074.
